This matter comes before the Court on Plaintiffs' and Defendant's cross-motions for summary adjudication. After reviewing the papers submitted by the parties and considering the arguments raised therein, the Court grants in part and denies in part Plaintiffs' motion and grants in part and denies in part Defendant's motion, and adopts the following order.

I. PROCEDURAL HISTORY

S.A. Thomas and E.L. Gipson bring this class action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 against Sheriff Leroy Baca in his official and individual capacities. The class includes pre-trial detainees and 1019

1 post-conviction prisoners who allege that they were required to 2 sleep on the floor of Los Angeles County jail facilities in 3 violation of their constitutional rights. The class is defined as 4 "individuals who, while in Los Angeles Sheriff Department ("LASD")
5 custody, were required to sleep on the floor of a LASD facility 6 with or without bedding." (Order (1) Granting Mot. Class Cert. and 7 (2) Granting Mot. Order Permit Ident. 15, May 17, 2005 ("Class 8 Cert. Order").)<sup>1</sup> The dates of class membership are limited from 9 December 18, 2002, to May 17, 2005. (Order Denying Pls.' Mot. Class 10 Not. 6-7, Dec. 20, 2005.) Individuals forced to sleep on the floor 11 "between December 18, 2000, and December 17, 2002, and who remained 12 in prison until at least December 18, 2002, are also included in 13 the class." (Id. 6.)

14 Plaintiffs move for summary adjudication of three issues: 15 (1) that there is a custom in the Los Angeles County jail system of 16 requiring inmates to sleep overnight on the floor because there are 17 insufficient available bunks; (2) that the custom is 18 unconstitutional; and (3) that Sheriff Baca is legally responsible 19 for the custom. (Pls.' Mot. for Summ. J. 1-2, May 24, 2006.)
20 Defendant also moves for summary judgment or, in the alternative, 21 summary adjudication. Defendant argues that he is entitled to 22 summary judgment because (1) the conditions of confinement do not 23 give rise to a constitutional violation; and (2) Defendant, in his 24 individual capacity, is entitled to qualified immunity. (Def.'s

25

26 <sup>1</sup> The practice of requiring inmates to sleep on the floor 27 will hereinafter be referred to as "floor-sleeping," as it is the 28 term used by LASD officials and inmates alike. For the same reason, inmates who sleep on the floor will be referred to as
"floor sleepers."

1 Mot. for Summ. J. 1-2, June 28, 2006 ("Def. Mot.") 1.) The Court
2 has concluded that Plaintiffs' are entitled to summary adjudication 3 that 1) there was a custom during the class period of requiring 4 inmates to sleep on the floor at LASD facilities, and 2) that the 5 custom violates the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments to the United 6 State Constitution. The Court grants summary adjudication to 7 Defendant on the question of qualified immunity.

9 II. LEGAL STANDARD

10 A. Summary Adjudication

11 Summary adjudication of an issue, like summary judgment, is 12 appropriate where "the pleadings, depositions, answers to 13 interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with the 14 affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any 15 material fact and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment 16 as a matter of law" on that issue. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c). A 17 genuine issue exists if "the evidence is such that a reasonable 18 jury could return a verdict for the nonmoving party," and material 19 facts are those "that might affect the outcome of the suit under 20 the governing law." Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S.
21 242, 248 (1986). In adjudicating a motion for summary judgment or 22 summary adjudication, the court must draw all reasonable inferences 23 in favor of the nonmoving party. Id. at 255.

24 B. Monell Liability under § 1983

25 Plaintiffs seek summary adjudication of issues related to 26 their official capacity claims against the defendant. Official 27 capacity suits provide "another way of pleading an action against 28 an entity of which an officer is an agent." Monell v. Dep't of 1 Soc. Servs., 436 U.S. 658, 690 n.55 (1978). Therefore, this suit

2 against Sheriff Baca in his official capacity is to be treated as a 3 suit against the County of Los Angeles.

4 The government as an entity is liable for the deprivation of 5 a plaintiff's constitutional rights under § 1983 when "execution of-6 a government's policy or custom, whether made by its lawmakers or 7 by those whose edicts or acts may fairly be said to represent 8 official policy, inflicts the [constitutional] injury." Id. at 9 694. While a municipal entity may not be held liable through § 10 1983 under a respondeat superior theory, it may be found liable for 11 a custom or persistent practice. Id. at 691, 694.

12 Here, Plaintiffs seek to establish liability based upon a 13 custom of requiring inmates to sleep on the floor. A practice that 14 has not received formal approval by an appropriate decision-maker 15 may fairly subject an entity to liability on the theory that the 16 relevant practice is so "permanent and well settled as to 17 constitute a custom or usage with the force of law." Id. at 691
18 (internal quotation marks omitted). Because of the causation 19 requirement implicit in § 1983, Plaintiffs must also establish that 20 the custom is the "moving force" behind their constitutional 21 injuries. Bd. of the County Comm'rs v. Brown, 520 U.S. 397, 404
22 (1997).<sup>2</sup> A custom is the moving force behind a constitutional

---

23
24 <sup>2</sup> Defendant contends that, in addition to proving that the 25 custom was the moving force behind their injuries, Plaintiffs must 26 also show that it constitutes deliberate indifference on the part 27 of the government entity in order to establish municipal liability.
28 (Def.'s Mot. 1-2.) Not so. A plaintiff must demonstrate deliberate indifference when it seeks to hold a municipality liable for "failing to prevent a deprivation of federal rights." Gebser
v. Lago Vista Indep. Sch. Dist., 524 U.S. 274, 291 (1998). Here, by contrast, Plaintiffs argue that an affirmative custom exists of

1 violation when it is "closely related to the ultimate injury" and 2 when the plaintiff can "establish that the injury would have been 3 avoided had proper policies been implemented." Long v. County of 4 L.A., 442 F.3d 1178, 1190 (9th Cir. 2006) (internal quotation marks 5 omitted).

6 C. Constitutional Framework

7 Plaintiffs have asserted causes of action under both the 8 Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution.
9 This is because the Plaintiff class includes both pre-trial 10 detainees and post-conviction inmates. Questions about the 11 constitutionality of the conditions of pre-trial detainees "are 12 properly addressed under the due process clause of the Fourteenth 13 Amendment" because such individuals have not yet been convicted of 14 any crime. Or. Advocacy Center v. Mink, 322 F.3d 1101, 1120 (9th 15 Cir. 2003); see Bell v. Wolfish, 441 U.S. 520 (1979). Questions 16 involving the treatment of post-conviction prisoners are, by 17 contrast, addressed under the Eighth Amendment. See Farmer v.
18 Brennan, 511 U.S. 825 (1994). Because "the due process rights of 19 pretrial detainees are 'at least as great as the Eighth Amendment 20 protections available to a convicted prisoner,'" the Ninth Circuit 21 has held that, "even though the pretrial detainees' rights arise

22
23 <sup>2</sup> (...continued)

24 requiring pre-trial and post-conviction detainees to sleep on the 25 floor. "Where a plaintiff claims that a particular municipal action 26 itself violates federal law, or directs an employee to do so, . .
27 .[s]ection 1983 itself contains no state-of-mind requirement 28 independent of that necessary to state a violation of the underlying federal right." Brown, 520 U.S. at 404-05. Therefore, Plaintiffs need not show deliberate indifference to establish a threshold of potential liability under Monell. However, Plaintiffs must nonetheless "establish the state of mind required to prove the underlying violation." Id. at 405.

1 under the Due Process Clause, the guarantees of the Eighth 2 Amendment provide a minimum standard of care for determining their 3 rights." Mink, 322 F.3d at 1120 (quoting City of Revere v. Mass.
4 Gen. Hosp., 463 U.S. 239, 244 (1983)). As will be explained, the 5 Court finds that the custom of floor sleeping in LASD facilities 6 violates the Eighth Amendment. As the constitutional floor, an 7 Eighth Amendment violation necessarily signifies a Fourteenth 8 Amendment violation. Accordingly, the Court will rely on Eighth 9 Amendment analysis.

10 The Eighth Amendment "prohibits the infliction of 'cruel and 11 unusual punishments' on those convicted of crimes." Wilson v.
12 Seiter, 501 U.S. 294, 297 (1991) (quoting U.S. Const. amend. VIII).
13 The Supreme Court has held that this prohibition extends beyond 14 physically barbarous punishments. Estelle v. Gamble, 429 U.S. 97, 15 102 (1976). Because the Eighth Amendment "embodies 'broad and 16 idealistic concepts of dignity, civilized standards, humanity and 17 decency,'" it proscribes punishments that are "incompatible with 18 'the evolving standards of decency that mark the progress of a 19 maturing society.'" Id. (quoting Trop v. Dulles, 356 U.S. 86, 101 20 (1958)).

21 Establishing a violation has both an objective and a 22 subjective prong. The objective prong requires that the 23 "deprivation [be] sufficiently serious," because "only those 24 deprivations denying the minimal civilized measure of life's 25 necessities are sufficiently grave to form the basis of an Eighth 26 Amendment violation." Wilson, 501 U.S. at 298 (internal quotation 27 marks and citation omitted). Such necessities include "adequate 28 shelter, food, clothing, sanitation, medical care, and personal

1 safety." Johnson v. Lewis, 217 F.3d 726, 731 (9th Cir. 2000), 2 (citing Farmer v. Brennan, 511 U.S. 825, 832 (1994)).

3 Under the subjective prong, Plaintiffs must show that "the 4 prison officials had a 'sufficiently culpable state of mind,' 5 acting with deliberate indifference." Hearns v. Terhune, 413 F.3d 6 1036, 1040 (9th Cir. 2005) (quoting Farmer, 511 U.S. at 834).
7 "'Deliberate indifference entails something more than mere 8 negligence but is satisfied by something less than acts or 9 omissions for the very purpose of causing harm or with knowledge 10 that harm will result.'" Id. (quoting Farmer, 511 U.S. at 834) 11 (internal alterations omitted).<sup>3</sup>

12 13 III. DISCUSSION

14 A. Evidentiary Issues

15 Before reaching the merits of Plaintiffs' constitutional 16 claims, several evidentiary matters must be addressed. In support 17 of their motion for summary judgment, Plaintiffs offer: (1)
18 deposition transcripts of LASD officials; (2) an August 30, 2005 19 letter to an inmate signed by Captain Timothy C. Cornell; (3) a 20 summary exhibit listing inmates who have provided information to 21 Plaintiffs' counsel concerning their own floor-sleeping; (4) a 22 summary exhibit listing floor sleepers from records provided to 23 Plaintiffs by Defendant pursuant to this Court's orders; (5) 24 Plaintiff Thomas's declaration; (6) declarations of inmates who

25
26 <sup>3</sup> The deliberate indifference standard does not "govern[] the 27 due process rights" of pretrial detainees; instead, analyzing Due 28 Process claims requires courts to balance the interests of the detainees against the "legitimate interests of the state." Mink, 322 F.3d at 1120-21.

1 claim they were forced to sleep on the floor while in LASD custody;
2 (7) newspaper articles regarding floor-sleeping in LASD facilities; 3 and (8) records produced by Defendant detailing 688 additional 4 instances of floor sleeping in February 2006. Defendant also 5 offers the following evidence in support of its motion and in 6 opposition to Plaintiffs' motion: (1) the Commitment Order in the 7 criminal matter against Plaintiff Thomas issued May 17, 2005; and 8 (2) a declaration of Captain John H. Clark. Both parties have also 9 submitted excerpts of the depositions of Plaintiffs Thomas and 10 Gipson, which have been lodged with the Court.

11 1. Information Provided by Captain John H. Clark

12 Captain Clark has stated both that floor-sleeping was a daily 13 occurrence, and that on some days no inmate slept on the floor.
14 This contradictory recollection raises the question of whether a 15 genuine issue of material fact has been created about the existence 16 of daily floor-sleeping, which could preclude summary adjudication.

17 After reviewing his various testimony, The Court finds that 18 Captain Clark's inconsistent statements do not create a genuine 19 issue of material fact.

20 In his deposition, Captain Clark stated that Men's Central 21 Jail ("MCJ") has floor sleepers. (Clark Dep. 19:6-11, March 11, 22 2005.) He testified that the number of floor sleepers varies 23 "depending on the population as it moves in and out of our jail," 24 but agreed that "from late August - very late August 2004 to date 25 [] the number of floor sleepers on any given day ranges between 35 26 and 500." (Id. at 19:17-19; 20:20-24) emphasis added.) However, 27 in a subsequent declaration attached to Defendant's opposition to 28 Plaintiffs' motion for summary adjudication, Captain Clark states:

1 [T]here are days when all inmates are afforded a bunk upon 2 which to sleep. On those occasions when some inmates are not afforded a bunk, there are typically between zero and 3 300 such inmates." (U)

4 (Clark Decl. ¶ 4 (emphasis in original).)

5 "[A]n affidavit submitted in response to a motion for summary 6 judgment which contradicts earlier sworn testimony without 7 explanation of the difference does not automatically create a 8 genuine issue of material fact." Scamihorn v. Gen. Truck Drivers, 9 282 F.3d 1078, 1086 n.7 (9th Cir. 2002). While "minor 10 inconsistencies that result from an honest discrepancy, a mistake, 11 or newly discovered evidence afford no basis for excluding an 12 opposition affidavit," a "sham" contradiction will not preclude summary judgment. Id. (internal quotation marks omitted).

13 The Court finds that Captain Clark's statement in his 14 declaration that on some days there are no floor sleepers in MCJ is 15 a "sham" contradiction, in that it is an attempt to avoid summary 16 judgment by creating an issue of fact rather than to clarify his 17 testimony. In his deposition, Captain Clark stated that counts of 18 floor sleepers are taken each day at MCJ and that the lowest number 19 of floor sleepers he could recall on any such daily count was 20 thirty five. Captain Clark's declaration does not clarify this 21 statement, but rather "flatly contradicts" it. See Kennedy v.
22 Allied Mut. Ins. Co., 952 F.2d 262, 267 (9th Cir. 1991). The Court
23 does find, however, that the portions of Captain Clark's 24 declaration in which he discusses the population at MCJ and the 25 reason for floor-sleeping clarify and supplement his prior 26 deposition. Accordingly, while those statements will be 27 considered, the Court will disregard Captain Clark's statements 28

1 that on some days during the relevant period there were no floor 2 sleepers.

3 2. Summary of Floor Sleepers Compiled by Plaintiffs'
4 Counsel from Records Provided by Defendant (v)

5 On May 17, 2005, the Court certified the class in this case
6 and ordered Defendant to "maintain records that identify by full 7 name and booking number each person who was required to sleep on a 8 floor, with or without bedding. The record for each person shall 9 also include the date, time and location for each occurrence."

10 (Class Cert. Order 15.) On July 1, 2005, the Court ordered 11 Defendant to produce to Plaintiffs copies of any and all records 12 that it had maintained in compliance with the May 17 Order and to 13 supplement the production at regular intervals. (See Prod. Order, 14 July 1, 2005.)

15 From those records, Plaintiffs' counsel compiled summaries of 16 floor sleepers in six LASD facilities during the period May 29, 17 2005, to September 29, 2005 ("Floor Sleeper Summaries").<sup>4</sup> The 18 first summary lists 24,688 instances where individuals were 19 required to sleep on the floor.<sup>5</sup> The second summary lists 5,181 20 individuals who were required to sleep on the floor for more than 21 one night. (See Pls.' Addit. Evidence.)

---

22 <sup>4</sup> On January 31, 2006, Plaintiffs submitted the full records 23 that Defendant produced in response to the Court's May 17 and July 24 1 Orders. (See Floor Sleeper Summaries.) On February 9, 2006 and 25 March 2, 2006, Plaintiffs submitted a summary of those individuals required to sleep on the floor for more than one night. (See Pls.' Tabulations of Repeat Floor Sleepers; Pls.' Addit. Evidence.)

26 <sup>5</sup> Plaintiffs' initial summary listed 24,713 instances of 27 floor sleeping. (See Floor Sleeper Summaries.) On March 2, 2006, 28 Plaintiffs filed a corrected summary of repeat floor sleepers.
Plaintiffs reduced the number of repeat floor sleepers by twenty-five, accordingly, the number of instances of floor sleeping considered by the Court is reduced by twenty-five.

1 The majority of the inmates slept on the floor for between two 2 and seven nights. For example, 2,523 individuals slept on the 3 floor twice, 1,148 individuals slept on the floor three times, and 4 668 slept on the floor four times. (Id.) The incidence of floor-
5 sleeping varies widely among the jail facilities. At the February 6 6, 2006 hearing on this motion, the Court ordered Defendant to file 7 notice of any objections to the summaries. Defendant Baca has 8 raised several objections to these summaries, and the Court 9 addresses them in turn.

10 i. Factual Objections

11 Defendant objects that the summary of repeat floor sleepers 12 contains misspelled names and inaccurate booking numbers. (Def.'s 13 Object. Floor Sleepers 6-7.) These are minor errors that do not 14 impact the overall accuracy of the material. Defendant also argues 15 that the summary contains an unspecified number of repeat entries 16 and that one entry incorrectly indicates that an inmate spent 17 twenty-six nights rather than two nights on the floor. (Id.)
18 Plaintiffs' counsel concedes that the actual number of repeat floor 19 sleepers is 5,181 and not 5,206 as originally calculated. (Pls.' 20 Reply to Def.'s Object. 7-9.) Further, Plaintiffs' counsel 21 concedes that one entry incorrectly listed an inmate sleeping on 22 the floor twenty six times. (Id. at 5-6.) Plaintiffs' counsel has 23 submitted a corrected summary that does not contain any substantive 24 inaccuracies.

25 ii. Rule 1006 Objection to Summary Exhibit

26 Defendant argues that the summaries fail to satisfy the 27 requirements of Federal Rule of Evidence 1006, which precludes the 28 use of summaries when the underlying records (1) are not too

1 voluminous to be conveniently examined in court; (2) are 2 inadmissible; or (3) were not made available to the opposing party
3 for inspection. See Amarel v. Connell, 102 F.3d 1494, 1516 (9th 4 Cir. 1996). This contention is without merit.

5 First, the Court finds that the underlying records of 6 thousands of instances of floor-sleeping over the course of four 7 months in multiple LASD jail facilities are too voluminous to be 8 conveniently examined.

9 Second, the underlying records upon which the summary exhibit 10 is based are admissible in evidence. Defendant objects that the 11 underlying records are inadmissible hearsay under Federal Rules of 12 Evidence 803 and 804. (Def.'s Obj. Floor-Sleepers at 5.) However, 13 the underlying records were prepared by Defendant and disclosed to 14 Plaintiffs pursuant to the Court's order. (See Class Cert. Order 15 15.) As statements made by and offered against Defendant, the 16 underlying records are not hearsay. See Fed. R. Evid. 801(d)(2) 17 (providing that a statement is not hearsay if it is offered against 18 a party and is "(C) a statement by a person authorized by the party 19 to make a statement concerning the subject, or (D) a statement by 20 the party's agent or servant concerning a matter within the scope 21 of the agency or employment, made during the existence of the 22 relationship"). Accordingly, the objection is overruled.

23 Defendant further objects that the records of floor sleepers 24 between May 28, 2005 and September 29, 2005 are inadmissible as 25 irrelevant because class membership dates from December 18, 2002 to 26 May 17, 2005 - prior to the records in question. (Def.'s Obj.
27 Floor-Sleepers 2; see also Order Denying Pls.' Mot. Class Notif.)

28

1 Although the incidents of floor-sleeping referred to in the 2 summary exhibit occurred after the class period closed, "'post-3 event evidence' may be used to prove the existence of a municipal 4 policy in effect at the time" of the alleged constitutional 5 violation, and indeed "may be highly probative with respect to that 6 inquiry." Henry v. County of Shasta, 132 F.3d 512, 519 (9th Cir.
7 1997), as amended on denial of rehearing, 137 F.3d 1372 (9th Cir.
8 1998). In the instant case, evidence that over 24,000 instances of 9 floor-sleeping occurred in the four month period immediately 10 following the close of the class is "highly probative" as to the 11 likelihood that the practice was similarly in place during the 12 class period.

13 Third and finally, Defendant's objection that the underlying 14 materials were not made available to Defendant is overruled because 15 the underlying materials belong to Defendant. Accordingly, the 16 Court finds that the summary exhibit satisfies Federal Rule of 17 Evidence 1006.

18 3. Declaration of Plaintiff Thomas

19 Defendant objects to a number of paragraphs within Plaintiff 20 Thomas's Declaration of August 28, 2006. ( See Decls. and Exs. in 21 Opp. to Mot. Sept. 11, 2006 ("Decls. & Exs."), Thomas Decl. 4-7.) 22 Defendant objects to each paragraph, except the first, on the 23 grounds that it either lacks foundation, is inadmissible hearsay, 24 is vague and ambiguous, or irrelevant. (Def.'s Obj., Oct. 6, 2006, 25 6-8.) These objections are overruled. Defendant further objects 26 to paragraphs 25 through 31 on the grounds that they concern an 27 incarceration that is not alleged in the operative pleading and is 28 therefore irrelevant. (Id.).

1 As alleged in the Third Amended Complaint ("TAC"), during the 2 relevant period Thomas was incarcerated once, from May 17, 2004 to 3 June 23, 2004. (TAC ¶ 15.) Defendant contends that Thomas was a 4 post-conviction prisoner, rather than a pretrial detainee during 5 that incarceration. (Def.'s Mot. at 6.) Thomas concedes he was a 6 post-conviction prisoner during that period. (Thomas Dep. 11-22.)
7 However, he also raises for the first time a previous occasion
8 during which he was forced to sleep on the floor of a LASD facility
9 while he was a pre-trial detainee in March of 2003. (See Pls.' 10 Stmt. of Genuine Issues 2 ("Plaintiff Thomas also previously was 11 incarcerated at the LASD Jail in March 2003 as a pretrial detainee 12 . . . .")) The Court finds that Plaintiff Thomas's reference to 13 his 2003 detention is irrelevant because it was not alleged in the 14 operative pleadings.

15 As such, the Court grants Defendant's motion to strike 16 paragraphs 25 through 31 of Plaintiff Thomas's declaration and 17 considers Plaintiff Thomas to have been a post-conviction inmate at 18 all times relevant to the instant case.

19 4. Declarations of Inmates Regarding Floor Sleeping

20 i. 1,150 Declarations of Floor Sleepers

21 Plaintiffs submitted 1,150 declarations of persons who alleged 22 they were forced to sleep on the floor of various LASD facilities.
23 (Evid. in Support of Pls.' Mot., April 3, 2006.) Defendant
24 objects to a number of declarations.

25 a. Irrelevancy

26 Defendant objects to 56 declarations as irrelevant because 27 they contain allegations unrelated to floor-sleeping. In fact, the 28 majority of these declarations describe in detail the conditions in

1 which the declarants were required to sleep on the floor. To the 2 extent that the declarations describe general conditions of 3 confinement that existed in combination with floor-sleeping - such 4 as the existence of staphylococcus infections, overflowing toilets, 5 vermin infestations, overcrowded cells, violent fights over which 6 inmate would receive a bunk, etc. - those allegations are 7 admissible. See Wilson, 501 U.S. at 304 (noting that the totality 8 of the conditions of confinement may in combination establish a 9 constitutional violation "when they have a mutually enforcing 10 effect that produces the deprivation of a single, identifiable 11 human need"). To the extent, however, that a number of 12 declarations include allegations unrelated to floor-sleeping, such 13 as denial of medical care, retaliation by jail officials, and food 14 poisoning, to name a few, such allegations are not relevant to the 15 instant case and are not admissible.

16 b. Vague and Ambiguous

17 Defendant objects to 87 declarations on the grounds that they 18 are impermissibly vague and ambiguous because "[t]he declarants 19 cannot identify the specific dates or lengths of time for which 20 they purportedly slept on the floor." (Def.'s Obj. 8-11, April 27, 21 2006.) Whether these declarants remember the exact dates they 22 slept on the floor is immaterial to the declarations' 23 admissibility. The allegation that an inmate slept on the floor of 24 an LASD facility, even without mention of the dates and length of 25 time, is probative on the existence of a custom of floor sleeping.

26 c. No Allegation of Floor Sleeping in LASD
27 Facilities

28 ///

1 Upon the objection of Defendant, the Court strikes the 2 declarations of Stephen Razo, Edward Reed, Ricky Saldenas, and 3 Lawrence Johnson because they do not state that the declarant was 4 required to sleep on the floor or do not allege floor-sleeping in 5 an LASD facility. Insofar as these declarations are admitted to 6 establish the existence of a custom of floor-sleeping, the Court 7 will only consider the declarations to which Defendant has not 8 specifically objected. The 74 declarations that allege physical 9 injuries or harm that resulted from floor-sleeping are not 10 admissible to prove that the declarants' injuries were caused by 11 floor-sleeping. However, they are admissible to show that certain 12 illnesses, staphylococcus infections in particular, occur within 13 the Los Angeles County jail system.

14 B. Existence of a Custom of Floor Sleeping

15 Plaintiffs contend that their evidence establishes that no 16 reasonable jury could find that a custom of floor did not exist in 17 the Los Angeles County jail system during the class period.<sup>6</sup> The 18 Court agrees.

19 A custom is a "longstanding practice . . . which constitutes 20 the standard operating procedure of the local government entity."
21 Menotti v. City of Seattle, 409 F.3d 1113, 1151 (9th Cir.
22 2005) (internal citation omitted). "Isolated or sporadic incidents"

23

---

24 <sup>6</sup> Indeed, Plaintiffs urge the Court to apply a presumption 25 that a custom of floor-sleeping exists. In Thompson v. City of Los 26 Angeles, 885 F.2d 1439 (9th Cir. 1989), the Ninth Circuit applied a 27 presumption that there was a custom of floor-sleeping in the Los 28 Angeles County jail system because such a custom had been found to exist just seven years earlier in Rutherford v. Pitchess, 475 F.Supp. 104 (C.D. Cal. 1978). At present, however, because nearly eighteen years have elapsed since Thompson, the Court will not presume that a custom of floor-sleeping persists.

1 are insufficient to establish liability; an "improper custom . . .
2 [must be] founded upon practices of sufficient duration, frequency 3 and consistency that the conduct has become a traditional method of 4 carrying out policy." Id.; cf. Meehan v. County of Los Angeles, 5 856 F.2d 102, 107 (9th Cir. 1988) (two incidents are not sufficient 6 to establish a custom).

7 Plaintiffs have presented evidence that, according to 8 Defendant's own records, over 24,000 instances of floor sleeping 9 throughout the Los Angeles County jail system occurred in just a 10 four month period. (Pls.' Add'l. Evid. 2-3, Jan. 17, 2006.) In 11 addition, 885 individuals submitted declarations that documented 12 their floor sleeping ordeals at LASD facilities. According to the 13 deposition of Captain Clark, on any given day in Men's Central Jail 14 alone there are anywhere from thirty five to 500 floor sleepers.
15 (Clark Dep. 20:6-12, March 11, 2005). Other LASD officials saw 16 inmates lying on the floor of the Inmate Reception Center ("IRC") 17 between April 2004 and January 2005, (Decls. and Exs., Ex. 10, Yim 18 Decl. 12:10-13:10), and explained that if an inmate admitted to the 19 IRC does not complete processing by nighttime, he is not moved to a 20 bunk until he is permanently housed unless he has medical or mental 21 health issues, (id. Ex. 11 at 143, Klugman Dep. 32:15-23). A 22 different LASD official, Captain Cornell, confirmed in a letter 23 that floor-sleeping is "a necessary result of temporary 24 insufficient bed space to accommodate every inmate." (Pls. Add'l 25 Brief. on Mot., Ex. 2, March 6, 2006.)

26 The class representatives provide vivid examples of when and 27 how floor-sleeping occurs in LASD facilities:

28 ///

1 Plaintiff E.L. Gipson was a pre-trial detainee while in LASD
2 custody and therefore represents class members who were pre-trial
3 detainees when they were forced to sleep on the floor. Plaintiff
4 Gipson has, at various times, been in custody at several LASD jail 5 facilities, including the Twin Towers Correctional Facility, Men's 6 Central Jail, and the Pitchess Detention Center. Gipson's 7 deposition reveals that from the moment he was admitted to Twin 8 Towers in 2004, he was forced to sleep on the floor.

9 While being processed, Gipson was held in a holding cell with 10 approximately 200 other inmates for approximately forty-eight 11 hours. (Gipson Dep. vol. I, 77:15 - 78:79.) Within the holding 12 cell, there were twenty benches, each of which could seat ten 13 people, but no place to sleep. (Id. 78:10-16.) As a result, 14 Gipson and the other inmates were forced to lie down on the floor 15 to sleep. (Id. 80:18.) After spending forty-eight hours in that 16 holding cell, Plaintiff Gipson stated that he was moved to a second 17 cell, "maybe 10 by 20, . . . [where there were] people laying down 18 like snakes huddled all up together trying to get rest because 19 they're tired from being up for 48 hours or whatever." (Id. 82:14-20 22.)

21 Plaintiff Gipson explained that after spending several hours
22 in that cell, he was taken to a third, virtually identical cell
23 where he was held for twenty-four to forty-eight hours, again 24 without a bunk. (Id. 84:2-23.) Once Gipson was eventually moved 25 to a module, he was assigned to a day room without a bunk on which 26 to sleep. (Id. 85:24 - 87:3.) When he arrived, the only available 27 place for him to place his mattress was on the floor directly under 28 the staircase. (Id. 87:4-9.) On yet another occasion, Gipson was

1 required to sleep on the floor of a shower, where he was held along 2 with sixty other inmates, none of whom were provided bunks or a 3 bed. (Id. vol. 2, 177:25 - 179:16.)

4 During another incarceration in 2004 at Men's Central Jail, 5 Gipson again was not provided a bunk and was forced to sleep on the 6 floor. (Id. vol. I 112:1, 9-11.) He was placed in a six-man cell 7 that was already filled to capacity when he arrived, such that he 8 had no choice but to sleep on the floor. He described the cell as 9 follows:

10 THE WITNESS: Okay. The cell is about 6 feet by 12 11 feet, I guess, or 8 feet by 12. It has six bunks and 12 a toilet. And I had to sleep on the floor in that 13 cell on a wet mattress that was by the toilet.

14 (Id. 111:12-25.)

15 The following excerpt from Plaintiff Gipson's deposition 16 provides one of the most illuminating descriptions of the 17 conditions in which inmates are forced to sleep on the floor:

18 [Plaintiffs' Counsel]: What conditions [in the jail] are 19 you talking about?

20 THE WITNESS: Okay. Five days of processing, . . . just 21 sitting on benches until you fall off into - you're just so 22 tired, you lay on the floor and you just wait and wait and 23 wait. And you're laying down with - packed on the floor, 24 cement, cold, with no blanket, nothing . . . and it's just 40 25 men in a 10-man day tank.

26 [Plaintiffs' Counsel]: What about at night?

27 THE WITNESS: It didn't matter if it was - you didn't know 28 if it was day or night. It just didn't matter. You were just there until you fall out. And you have to rest. So you end up on the floor with 30 other guys . . . until you said you're not going to lay down on the floor, but you just don't have a choice. You know, that breaks you. It makes you feel bad.

Q. How does that in particular make you feel bad?

A. Because, after that, you finally get processing [sic] and they send you to a dirty, nasty cell, a six-man cell or a five-man cell, and you're the sixth man, and you got to sleep under a bunk.

And you think about hurting somebody. You think about - you're bigger than that guy that's got a bunk, and you want to take him off the bunk and smash him down and take his bunk,

1 but, you know, why you have to do this? Why should I have to 2 go through that? You think about that, and it just tears you up inside.

3 And then you sleep on the floor and your back hurts, and 4 you're in pain . . . You can't do nothing. You feel like 5 you're just in a bad nightmare, like a - you know, they used to talk about prisons in other countries, but that's right here in Los Angeles County jail, the same conditions.

6 (Id. 52:19 - 54:12.)<sup>7</sup>

7 Plaintiff S.A. Thomas was a post-conviction inmate while in 8 LASD custody and thus represents post-conviction inmates required 9 to sleep on the floor. Plaintiff Thomas was also forced to sleep 10 on the floor. In his declaration, Thomas described the following:

11 13. The day room was very crowded, and there was only 12 about ten inches between my mattress and the mattress of 13 another inmate.

14 14. The only place I could find to sleep was under a 15 stairway leading up to a second tier which housed suicidal 16 inmates.

17 (Decls. and Exs., Thomas Decl. 3:13-18.)<sup>8</sup>

18 Defendant acknowledges that floor sleeping occurred during the 19 relevant period, but stresses that the vast majority of inmates
20 have a bunk on which to sleep. (Def. Opp. to Mot. at 9.)

21 Defendant Baca argues that if MCJ housed 5,400 inmates on a given 22 day, and 300 slept on the floor, 94.4% of inmates would receive a

---

23 <sup>7</sup> Although cleanliness and sanitation are not the focus of 24 the instant inquiry, the Court notes that Gipson reported seeing 25 vermin and roaches on a daily basis, (Gipson Dep. vol. I, 127:12-26 23), that the bedding he did receive was wet, (id. 113:9-10), and that he was forced to sleep in "molded and mildewed" rooms, (id.
vol. 2, 177:25-179:16). He also developed a staphylococcus infection on his left heel during his ordeal that required hospitalization; Gipson believed he contracted the infection from the standing water on the floor of the cell in the area he was required to sleep. (id. vol. I, 114:18-118:25)

27 <sup>8</sup> Like Gipson, Thomas reported unsanitary conditions suffered 28 by floor sleepers; he also developed chronic back and shoulder pain during the period when he was forced to sleep on the floor. (Thomas Dep. 49:29, 52:9-15.)

1 bunk on which to sleep. (Id. 11) Therefore, Baca contends that 2 "[w]hen the uncontroverted evidence demonstrates that a full 94.4%
3 of inmates at Men's Central Jail sleep on a bunk in the worst case 4 scenario, it would be improper to issue a ruling that suggests all 5 inmates sleep on the floor." (Id. 14.)

6 The Court is not persuaded. Plaintiffs are not asking for a 7 ruling that "all inmates sleep on the floor," nor does the law 8 require such a showing in order to establish the existence of a 9 custom. Plaintiffs have submitted sufficient evidence, based in 10 important part on Defendant's own records, to prove that it is the 11 "'standard operating procedure' of the local government entity" to 12 require inmates to sleep on the floor when there are insufficient 13 bunks available, and that, over the period of relevant time, 14 multiple inmates were denied bunks on a daily basis. Menotti, 409 15 F.3d at 1151. That the majority of inmates receive a bunk on which 16 to sleep does nothing to rebut the consistency with which many 17 inmates are forced to sleep on the floor, a practice that occurred 18 as frequently as 24,000 times over the course of just four months.
19 See Thompson, 885 F.2d at 1448-49 (holding that there was a 20 rebuttable presumption of floor sleeping in LASD facilities because 21 seven years earlier "the county jail was often not providing each 22 inmate with a bed" (emphasis added)); Anela v. City of Wildwood, 23 790 F.2d 1063, 1069 (3d Cir. 1986) (holding that city defendant
24 could be held liable for custom of unconstitutional prison 25 conditions, including floor-sleeping, where the evidence "revealed 26 a longstanding condition that had become an acceptable standard and 27 practice," and where the city "offered no evidence rebutting the 28 absence of beds or mattresses"). Drawing all inferences in favor

1 of Defendant Baca, the Court finds that no reasonable jury could 2 find that a custom of floor-sleeping did not exist in the Los 3 Angeles County jail system during the class period. See Anderson, 4 477 U.S. at 248. Accordingly, the Court grants Plaintiffs' motion 5 for summary adjudication on the existence of a custom of floor-6 sleeping.

7 C. Constitutionality of Floor-Sleeping at LASD Facilities

8 Plaintiffs seek summary adjudication of whether this custom of 9 floor sleeping is unconstitutional. (See TAC ¶ 25; Reply 22.) The 10 Court finds that the practice of requiring inmates to sleep on the 11 floor of LASD jails violates the Eighth Amendment.

12 1. Objective Prong - Floor Sleeping is Sufficiently 13 Serious

14 The Court finds that Defendant's custom of floor-sleeping is, 15 objectively, a sufficiently serious deprivation of "the minimal 16 civilized measure of life's necessities" to warrant protection by 17 the Eighth Amendment. Wilson, 501 U.S. at 298 (internal quotation 18 marks omitted). With this conclusion the Court must, 19 unfortunately, join in nearly thirty years of judicial recognition 20 and condemnation of the practice in LASD facilities.

21 Judge William Gray first identified floor-sleeping at LASD 22 facilities as unconstitutional in 1978. See Rutherford v.
23 Pitchess, 457 F. Supp. 104 (C.D. Cal. 1978), aff'd in part and 24 rev'd in part on other grounds, 710 F.2d 572 (9th Cir. 1983), rev'd 25 sub nom., Block v. Rutherford, 468 U.S. 576 (1984)). In that case, 26 a class of pre-trial detainees and post-conviction inmates 27 challenged various conditions of confinement at Los Angeles County 28 Central Jail, including the practice of floor-sleeping. The court

1 concluded that it was "intolerable" that some inmates were "obliged 2 to sleep on mattresses on the concrete floor of the cell or of the 3 walkway that fronts a row of cells." Id. at 109. He explained 4 that "[i]f the public . . . finds it necessary to incarcerate a 5 person, basic concepts of decency, as well as reasonable respect 6 for constitutional rights, require that he be provided a bed." Id.
 7 (internal quotation marks omitted).<sup>9</sup>

8 Eleven years later, the Ninth Circuit confirmed that floor-9 sleeping in LASD facilities could violate the Constitution.
 10 See Thompson v. City of Los Angeles, 885 F.2d 1439 (9th Cir. 1989).
 11 In that case, the court, relying on the findings in Rutherford, 12 reversed the district court's grant of summary judgment in favor of 13 the defendant, holding that the plaintiff's "uncontroverted 14 allegation that he was provided with neither a bed nor even a 15 mattress unquestionably constitutes a cognizable" constitutional 16 claim."<sup>10</sup> Id. at 1448.

17 Defendant Baca argues that Thompson is distinguishable because 18 Plaintiffs here were generally afforded mattresses. The 19

20 <sup>9</sup> The court did not expressly indicate whether its ruling 21 hinged upon the Eighth or the Fourteenth Amendment. See 22 Rutherford, 457 F. Supp. at 108 (quoting Supreme Court cases about 23 both Amendments). However, the court's reliance on the Eighth 24 Amendment "evolving standards of decency" language, as well its 25 recognition that the class included post-conviction inmates - the conditions of whom are governed by the Eighth Amendment - suggests that its conclusion was at least in large part rooted in Eighth Amendment analysis. See id. (quoting language regarding the Eighth Amendment from Trop v. Dulles, 356 U.S. 86, 100 (1958)).

26 <sup>10</sup> Because that case dealt with a pre-trial detainee 27 plaintiff, the court used Fourteenth Amendment, rather than Eighth 28 Amendment, analysis. Thompson, 885 F.2d at 1448. However, its reliance on Rutherford indicates that it may have questioned the constitutionality of the practice under the Eighth Amendment as well.

1 Court cannot agree. Nothing in the Ninth Circuit's reasoning
2 hinged on the lack of a mattress, rather than the lack of a bunk.
3 To the contrary, the court emphasized cases holding that "a jail's 4 failure to provide detainees with a mattress and bed or bunk runs 5 afoul of the commands of the Fourteenth Amendment." Id. (emphasis 6 added) (citations omitted). The issue of whether floor-sleeping 7 with mattresses is unconstitutional was not before the court in 8 Thompson. Nevertheless, its reliance on Rutherford - which held 9 unconstitutional the practice of forcing inmates to sleep on a 10 mattress on the floor - suggests that the Ninth Circuit views 11 floor-sleeping, with or without a mattress, as offending "basic 12 concepts of decency, as well as reasonable respect for 13 constitutional rights," id., language that directly implicates the 14 Eighth Amendment.

15       Following in the footsteps of this jurisprudence, the Court 16 finds that requiring inmates to sleep on the floor deprives them of 17 a minimum measure of civilized treatment and access to life's 18 necessities because access to a bed is an integral part of the 19 "adequate shelter" mandated by the Eighth Amendment. Johnson, 217 20 F.3d at 731. The "routine discomfort inherent in the prison 21 setting" may not state a constitutional claim, id., but depriving 22 inmates of beds goes deeper. The Constitution clearly does not 23 allow prisoners to suffer the deprivation of adequate food or 24 water. See id. at 730 (identifying a cognizable constitutional 25 violation when inmates alleged they were, inter alia, given 26 "spoil[ed]" food and limited water for several days). Just so, 27 prisons may not deprive those in their care of a basic place to 28 ///

1 sleep - a bed; for like wearing clothing, sleeping in a bed
2 identifies our common humanity.

3 That many individuals, for cultural or health reasons, choose 4 to sleep on the floor in no way detracts from this point. A 5 predilection for camping under the stars or the soothing touch a 6 hard futon may have on a sore back is entirely different in kind 7 from stripping an individual of the option of using a bed. Quite 8 simply, that a custom of leaving inmates nowhere to sleep but the 9 floor constitutes cruel and unusual punishment is nothing short of 10 self-evident.

11 The Court is not alone in finding that a minimum degree of 12 civilized conduct demands such a conclusion. In Lareau v. Manson, 13 651 F.2d 96, 107-08 (2d Cir. 1981) (emphasis added), for example, 14 the Second Circuit affirmed the district court's ruling that 15 "forcing men to sleep on mattresses on the floors" violates the 16 Eighth Amendment because it does "not provide minimum decent 17 housing under any circumstances for any period of time."
18 Similarly, the Third Circuit, in holding that a county's remedial 19 plan to improve conditions in its jail would satisfy Eighth and 20 Fourteenth Amendment requirements of adequate shelter if, inter 21 alia, it provided inmates with "bunk-type beds of their own," 22 characterized forced floor-sleeping, even with mattresses, as an 23 "unsanitary and humiliating practice." Union County Jail Inmates 24 v. Di Buono, 713 F.2d 984, 996, 1001 (3d Cir. 1983); see also Lyons 25 v. Powell, 838 F.2d 28, 30 (1st Cir. 1988) (holding that floor-26 sleeping with mattress stated cognizable Fourteenth Amendment 27 violation); Anela, 790 F.2d at 1069 (same, in light of Lareau and 28 Union County); Albano v. Mitchell, No. C 97-3781, 1998 WL 101743,

1 at *1 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 24, 1998) (unpublished) (noting that 2 allegations of floor-sleeping "may be sufficient to implicate 3 denial of the minimum civilized measures of life's necessities");
 4 Loya v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, No. CV 91-216, 1992 WL 176131, at *2 5 (D. Idaho May 4, 1992) (unpublished) (noting its own previous 6 holding that "sleeping on the floor is constitutionally 7 prohibited"); Balla v. Bd. of Corr., 656 F. Supp. 1108, 1114 (D.
 8 Idaho 1987) (enjoining floor-sleeping and characterizing it as 9 "dehumanizing, intolerable and certainly of no penological 10 benefit"); Capps v. Atiyeh, 495 F. Supp. 802 (D. Or. 1980) (holding 11 that overcrowded conditions which led to practices including floor-12 sleeping violated the Eighth Amendment); Stewart v. Gates, 450 F.
 13 Supp. 583, 588 (C.D. Cal. 1978) (holding floor-sleeping 14 unconstitutional).<sup>11</sup>

15 The basic humanity inherent in providing access to a bed 16 highlights the practice of forced floor-sleeping as one of the 17 unconstitutional effects of prison overcrowding. While 18 "[o]vercrowding itself is not a violation of the Eighth 19 Amendment[, i]t can, under certain circumstances, result in 20 specific effects which can form the basis for an Eighth Amendment 21 violation." Hoptowit v. Ray, 682 F.2d 1237, 1248-49 (9th Cir.
 22 1982). This makes sense. Overcrowding is not itself the

---

23
 24 <sup>11</sup> The Court is not persuaded by the decisions Defendant 25 cites from other circuits summarily holding that floor-sleeping 26 does not state a constitutional violation. See, e.g., Mann v.
 27 Smith, 796 F.2d 79, 85 (5th Cir. 1986) (holding claim that floor-28 sleeping is unconstitutional was "meritless" because "Mann has cited no case holding that the Constitution requires elevated beds for prisoners, and we know of no source for such a right."); Hamm
v. DeKalb County, 774 F.2d 1567, 1575 (11th Cir. 1985) (upholding grant of summary judgment for the defendant without considering the detailed facts of the floor sleeping).

1 constitutional harm; it is merely the reason behind the harm. As 2 the Ninth Circuit has emphasized, overcrowding "may dilute other 3 constitutionally required services such that they fall below the 4 minimum Eighth Amendment standards, and it may reach a level at 5 which the shelter of the inmates is unfit for human habitation."
6 Id. Forcing inmates to sleep on the floor stoops to that 7 unconstitutional level.<sup>12</sup>

8 International guidelines support this basic right. See, e.g., 9 Roper v. Simmons, 543 U.S. 551, 578 (2005) (considering 10 "international opinion" in Eighth Amendment analysis); Atkins v.
11 Virginia, 536 U.S. 304 (2002) (same). For example, the United 12 Nations Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners, 13 which contain guidelines regarding confinement conditions and set 14 forth minimum acceptable prison conditions, provide that "[e]very 15 prisoner shall, in accordance with local or national standards, be 16 provided with a separate bed, and with separate and sufficient 17 bedding which shall be clean when issued, kept in good order and 18 changed often enough to ensure its cleanliness." United Nations

21 <sup>12</sup> For this reason, the Court does not subscribe to an 22 interpretation of the Eighth Amendment that protects only inmates 23 who have suffered some external, physical harm as a result of the 24 floor-sleeping. See, e.g., Ramirez v. City and County of San 25 Francisco, No. C. 89-4528, 1997 WL 33013, at *7 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 23, 26 1997) (concluding that "courts limit relief to those cases in which 27 inmates have suffered harm from sleeping on the floor"). It is the 28 degradation inherent in the forced floor-sleeping itself that is the harm. See Thompson, 885 F.2d at 1448 (holding floor-sleeping to present a cognizable constitutional claim without mention of any external harm). Nevertheless, the Court cannot help but note that Plaintiffs in this case have presented evidence that they suffered significant external harm from the filthy conditions in which they were forced to sleep on the floor, including back pain requiring medical treatment, coughing from the dust and grime, staphylococcus infections, exposure to leaking sewage, and exposure to cockroaches and vermin. (Gipson Dep. 115:18-116:7, 121:7, 128:6-22.)

1 Standard Minimum Rules for Treatment of Prisoners, E.S.C. Res. 663
2 C (XXIV), U.N. ESCOR, 24th Sess., Supp. No. 1, ¶ 19, U.N. Doc
3 E/3048 (1957) (amended 1977) (emphasis added); see Lareau, 651 F.2d 4 at 106 (relying on these standards in assessing the meaning of 5 "adequate shelter" and holding floor-sleeping unconstitutional).

6 Defendant asks the Court to excuse the existence of floor-
7 sleeping because of the need to segregate prisoners for security 8 reasons. (Def.'s Opp'n 9.) According to Defendant, because "an 9 inmate of one classification cannot be indiscriminately placed with 10 inmates of other classifications," certain individuals may be 11 required to sleep on the floor even if a bunk is available with 12 inmates of another classification. (Clark Decl. ¶ 9.) In other 13 words, Defendant contends that the need to classify a large inmate 14 population causes, and thereby justifies floor-sleeping. The Court 15 disagrees.

16 Prisons have a legitimate interest in "maintain[ing] security 17 and order at the institution," and they may impose restrictions
18 that are reasonably related to that interest. Bell v. Wolfish, 441 19 U.S. 520, 540 (1979). However, as explained, access to a bed is a 20 fundamental human necessity under the Eighth Amendment. A 21 restriction that violates that constitutional floor cannot possibly 22 be reasonable. See Johnson v. California, 543 U.S. 499, 511 (2005) 23 (noting that "the integrity of the criminal justice system depends 24 on full compliance with the Eighth Amendment" and that 25 "[m]echanical deference to the findings of state prison officials 26 in the context of the eighth amendment would reduce that provision 27 to a nullity in precisely the context where it is most necessary" 28 (internal quotation marks omitted)).

1 Further, were there sufficient bunks to accommodate all 2 inmates once they are classified, inmates would not be required to 3 sleep on the floor. In other words, Defendant's argument implies 4 that floor-sleeping furthers an economic interest in housing more 5 inmates without expending the resources necessary to increase the 6 number of available beds. The Court cannot abide by such a rule.
7 Allowing a cost defense to neutralize constitutional requirements 8 would permit jails to maintain the most objectively abhorrent and 9 inhumane conditions simply because eliminating them would require 10 additional resources.

11 Of course, any inquiry into conditions of confinement 12 "spring[s] from constitutional requirements and . . . judicial 13 answers to them must reflect that fact rather than a court's idea 14 of how best to operate a detention facility." Bell, 441 U.S. at 15 539. Los Angeles County Jail is the largest jail in the country.
16 Providing the basic necessities of 19,500 inmates spread across 17 eight custody facilities, numerous patrol stations, and at least 40 18 courthouses, as well as addressing serious medical, mental health, 19 and security issues, is a complicated enterprise. Therefore, the 20 Court understands that in the case of exigent circumstances, such 21 as a "genuine emergency situation, like a fire or a riot," Lareau, 22 651 F.2d at 108, providing each inmate with a bed may be 23 impossible. See Anderson v. City of Kern, 45 F.3d 1310, 1314-15 24 (9th Cir. 1995) (affirming denial of injunction that would have 25 prevented prison officials from placing violent or suicidal inmates 26 in "safety cell" without a bed for "short periods of time" in the 27 face of evidence that such prisoners used objects, including beds, 28 to harm themselves). However, while the Court has no desire to 1 inject itself in the management of the jail, "'federal courts [must 2 nonetheless] discharge their duty to protect constitutional 3 rights.'" Rhodes v. Chapman, 452 U.S. 337, 352 (1981) (quoting 4 Procunier v. Martinez, 416 U.S. 396, 405-06 (1974)).

5 Accordingly, the Court holds as follows:

6 In the absence of exigent circumstances, the objective prong 7 of the Eighth Amendment requires LASD facilities to assign and 8 provide each inmate with a bunk for the night immediately following 9 the inmate's initial processing within the facility or transfer to 10 a medical center or other place of screening or treatment, and for 11 every night thereafter. Inmates must be processed within a 12 reasonable amount of time. See Vanke v. Block, No. CV 98-4111, 13 2002 WL 1836305, at *1 (C.D. Cal. Aug. 8, 2002) (referring to an 14 order that defendant LASD release those inmates entitled to release 15 within "the period of time that is required to perform the 16 administrative steps incident to release"), rev'd on other grounds, 17 77 F. App'x 948 (9th Cir. 2003). A sudden, extreme rise in inmate 18 population caused by an acute event, such as a civil disturbance, 19 may affect the length of time that is reasonable for processing.<sup>13</sup>
20 However, overcrowding or regular classification considerations do 21 not constitute exigent circumstances that would justify floor-22 sleeping. In general, the Court expects that processing, including

23 _____
24 <sup>13</sup> Cf. Hernandez v. Denton, 861 F.2d 1421, 1435 (9th Cir.
25 1988) (holding that a plaintiff who alleged that he "was forced to 26 sleep on a sheet metal bunk without a mattress, for one night" did 27 not state a cognizable constitutional violation but not discussing 28 how long he was in processing or at what time of day or night he entered the cell in question), vacated on other grounds sub nom.
Denton v. Hernandez, 493 U.S. 801 (1989). Hernandez is further distinguishable because it is not a floor-sleeping case; the plaintiff in that case alleged a lack of bedding, not the lack of a bed.

1 any initial medical evaluation, should not take more than twenty-2 four hours, and, as technology improves, the time should decrease.

3           2.    Deliberate Indifference

4           Having found that Defendant has established a custom of floor-5 sleeping in LASD facilities, and that forced floor-sleeping falls 6 below the Eighth Amendment's minimum standards of decency, the 7 subjective "deliberate indifference" prong follows easily.
8 Defendant undeniably knew of the practice; not only does it 9 acknowledge that floor-sleeping occurs (arguing instead that its 10 frequency does not constitute a custom or violate the Eighth 11 Amendment's objective prong), but it is in large part Defendant's 12 own records that convinced the Court of the custom's existence. It 13 is not necessary that Defendant intended to cause Plaintiffs harm.
14 See Hearns, 413 F.3d at 1040. Indeed, the Court believes that 15 Defendant would prefer to avoid floor-sleeping. Nevertheless, 16 there is no genuine issue of fact as to whether Defendant had 17 "actual knowledge of the risk" that inmates would be forced to 18 sleep on the floor; that knowledge is sufficient to grant summary 19 adjudication in favor of Plaintiffs. Id. 1041 (holding that a 20 "well-documented" string of violence that contravened the Eighth 21 Amendment's objective prong was sufficient to show actual knowledge 22 on the part of prison officials, and that actual knowledge would 23 constitute deliberate indifference) (internal quotation marks 24 omitted).

25           3.    Policy as the Moving Force Behind the Violation

26           Plaintiffs must also show that Defendant's custom was "the 27 moving force behind the deprivation of a constitutional right."
28 Long, 442 F.3d at 1190. Because the injury - forced floor-sleeping

1 - "would have been avoided" had Defendant changed its custom, id., 2 the Court finds this requirement met as well, and therefore 3 concludes that Plaintiffs are entitled to summary adjudication that 4 Defendant's custom violates the Eighth Amendment. Because the 5 Fourteenth Amendment provides greater protection for inmates, the 6 Court finds that the custom violates that portion of the 7 Constitution as well.

8 D. Individual Capacity Claim: Qualified Immunity

9 The parties have filed cross-motions for summary adjudication 10 of the issue of whether Sheriff Baca, in his individual capacity, 11 is legally responsible for the custom of floor-sleeping. The Court 12 rules in favor of Defendant.

13 Qualified immunity protects from civil liability government 14 officials whose conduct "does not violate clearly established 15 statutory or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person 16 would have known." Harlow v. Fitzgerald, 457 U.S. 800, 818 (1982).
17 A constitutional right is clearly established if "it would be clear 18 to a reasonable [official] that his conduct was unlawful in the 19 situation he confronted." Saucier v. Katz, 533 U.S. 194, 201
20 (2001). Although Rutherford and Thompson go far in establishing a 21 clear right against floor-sleeping, Thompson involved an inmate who 22 had neither bed nor mattress, and the court criticized that prison
23 condition on Fourteenth Amendment grounds. Further, neither case 24 speaks to the length of time LASD may allow inmates to wait to 25 receive a bunk while still comporting with constitutional 26 standards. Therefore, it was not unreasonable for Sheriff Baca to 27 believe that the presence of a mattress cured any constitutional 28 defect, and not to realize that floor-sleeping violated the Eighth

1 Amendment as well as the Fourteenth. Accordingly, the Court finds 2 that Sheriff Baca is entitled to qualified immunity and grants
3 summary adjudication on that issue for Defendant in his individual 4 capacity.

6 IV. CONCLUSION

7 Based on the foregoing reasons, the Court grants in part and 8 denies in part Plaintiffs' motion, and grants in part and denies in 9 part Defendant's motion.
